

MRS. PANKHURST REFUSED ADMITTANCE TO COUNTRY

Immigration Officials Three Hours after Steamer
Docks Issue Order TO DEPORT LEADER

Of English Suffragets Who Comes Across the Atlantic on a Lecture Tour.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English suffragist leader who arrived here today for a lecture tour, was ordered deported by the immigration authorities within a little less than three hours after the vessel, upon which she came, had docked.

The special board of inquiry which heard her case voted not to admit her to this country under bond but to send her back to France forthwith.

Mrs. Pankhurst's lawyer, Herbert Reeves, announced his intention of appealing the case immediately to Commissioner General Caminetti. Pending decision by Mr. Caminetti, Reeves said he would seek to have his client admitted to this country under bond, so that she might be able to speak at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Mrs. O. P. H. Belmont, the New York woman suffragist leader, who was to have been Mrs. Pankhurst's host, was prepared to give bond up to $100,000 for Mrs. Pankhurst's good behavior while in America. Under the ruling of the special board, she will not be permitted to do so, and Mrs. Pankhurst must remain at Ellis Island until deported.

Mrs. Pankhurst's deportation was ordered under Section 2 of the Immigration law. This section provides for the exclusion of persons convicted abroad of crimes involving moral turpitude. The board held that Mrs. Pankhurst's conviction in England of conspiracy to commit arson brought her within this class.

The militant leader's case moved with unexcelled celerity. She was interrogated by inspectors on board the liner upon which she made the trip from Havre, was detained but a few minutes after the vessel docked, was rushed in a special tug to the detention station at Ellis Island and taken immediately before the special board of inquiry there. Her examination by the board lasted a little over an hour. She was not represented by counsel. Mrs. Pankhurst told the immigration officers that her purpose in coming to America was not to advocate militant methods, but to lecture upon the history and progress of the cause in England.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, English militant suffragist leader, arriving in New York today was denied admission to this country until a special board of inquiry could determine whether her prison record in England was such that she should be excluded from the United States.

Mrs. Pankhurst was detained aboard the liner, Providence, when it docked until a special tug could be secured to take her to Ellis Island. A special board of inquiry convened there immediately and upon the decision of that board will depend the disposition of her case.

The board set itself to determine if Mrs. Pankhurst's convictions in England were for a crime involving moral turpitude. If so she would come within the class excluded by the immigration act; if not, the act does not apply. To inspectors, who questioned her, she said that her conviction was for a political offense and it was generally understood that her sentence had expired when she left England for France, although she had not been formally notified.

For a quarter of an hour the militant leader was questioned by inspectors. A curious crowd of passengers, eager to learn the disposition of her case, trooped into the door and pressed the two score newspaper reporters forward until they surrounded the little group.

Reta Ghilds Door, Mrs. Pankhurst's traveling companion, sought to sit beside her during the hearing but the inspectors would not permit this.

"I am not coming to America to tell American women how to vote," said Mrs. Pankhurst to the reporters. "They are abundantly able to manage their own campaign. Their progress has been remarkable."

There was no touch of militancy about Mrs. Pankhurst's face or figure. She was dressed in a gray suit, cut V shaped at the throat. A blue hat that bore but a single ostrich plume of black, and was half hidden by a blue veil. Her sea-skin cloak touched the floor as she walked. Her fast graying hair belied the youth that seemed stamped on her features. She had almost recovered, she said, from the illness caused by forcible feeding in prison. She was willing to live her experiences all over again, a dozen times if need be for the cause.

"Would I see it through," she repeated in indignant answer to a question by a reporter, "of course I would, I would die if I had to for the cause and there are hundreds of women in England who would do the same. I don't set myself up as different from any other woman."

"We are having a revolution in England just as you of America had when you wanted your freedom. We English women are fighting for our freedom. Just as you won yours."

MOB

Of Japanese is More Picturesque Than a Western Mob
in This Country.

TOKYO, Japan, Oct. 18.—The difference between a Japanese and other mobs was demonstrated during the popular manifestations to demand the sending of armed forces to China to punish the Chinese for attacking Japanese in Nanking.

The gathering was certainly more picturesque than a western mob and it balanced at times between the tragic and the farcical. At one end of the vast Hibiy Park the huge band stand was jammed with frenzied orators. In front were undulating masses of Japanese in flowing, artistic robes, almost all wearing wooden sandals over bare feet and the great majority jauntily swinging walking sticks as they sauntered back and forth to hear the hoarse voiced agitators and to gossip over the events of the day. Occasionally they would stop to stare curiously at the few foreigners present.

The slightest incident served to agitate this vast concourse and send it rushing down the field, the wooden shoes making the clatter of a force of cavalry. Hundreds climbed trees and, hanging their wooden shoes across the boughs, took in the show from their points of vantage. A pioneer suffragette dragged herself to the band stand and urged the help of Japanese women to the cause of the meeting.

Even sheets of rain failed to shake the spirit of the mob, and all afternoon and night students and workmen continued to harangue the crowd, which refused to be called off despite hunger and thirst until daybreak. The demonstration indicates the tendency of the masses to have a greater voice in the doings of the empire. It was an illustration of the growth of democracy.

TO INSPECT

Greenheart Timber in British Guiana is Forest Service Man.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Clayton D. Mell of the U. S. forest service has sailed from New York for British Guiana to inspect greenheart timber to be used in the construction of docks and other marine works for the Panama canal. He goes at the request of the isthmian commission, in order that the getting genuine greenheart timber, for which a number of inferior substitutes are offered.

Genuine greenheart has the reputation of being the most resistant wood to the attack of marine borers and to decay. Borers are especially bad in tropical waters. The wood is, in addition, hard, heavy, and durable, and not subject to damage from impact and wear. Indisputable records show that the best grades of this wood surpass iron and steel as to lasting qualities in contact with salt water. It has been known and used since 1769. Logs have remained intact under water for 100 years. Lock gates in English canals have been made of it for years, and the only limit of their durability so far has been the length of service of their iron bolts and fastenings, which usually can be renewed without much trouble. Greenheart in Liverpool lock gates built in 1856, removed to allow a deepening and widening of the ship channel in 1894, was used over again when the gates were reconstructed. The sills and fenders of the lock gates at Panama will be made of greenheart, and much of the dock will be constructed of the same material.

Nansen's ship, the Fram, and the antarctic vessels, Discovery, used by one of the Scott expeditions, and the Gauss, used by Drygalski, were all planked with greenheart. The exceedingly great durability of the wood is said to be due, at least in part, to the presence of an alkaloid, which is used as a substitute for cinchona, the basis of quinine.

A number of other woods which grow with greenheart in the tropical forests of the Guianas resemble it so closely that they are likely to be accepted even by an expert. They have many of the qualities of the genuine timber, but in a lesser degree. Some are quite inferior, and it is essential that they should be avoided. In order that the canal commission may be sure of the right wood it asked the forest service to assist it in an investigation of the greenheart situation in British Guiana, and Mr. Mell's present trip is a result of that request.

From the Isthmus of Panama Mr. Mell will go directly to Demerara, British Guiana, the principal port of export for the greenheart. He will be accompanied by a member of the commission, and will see all the operations of lumbering in order that the true greenheart may be selected and identified without possibility of error. He will ascertain where the genuine can be obtained in sufficient quantities and right sizes, flat out what substitutes are to be avoided, and prepare specifications which, incorporated in purchase contracts, will eliminate everything but genuine greenheart.

PROBLEM

Confronting Japan in Controversy with America is Not Easy of Solution.

TOKYO, Japan, Oct. 18.—Discussion of the American-Japanese controversy gave occasion recently to Count Shigenobu Okuma, former Japanese Foreign Minister, to express his impressions of American temperament.

The problem was a vast one, he declared—more far-reaching than is commonly thought by the Japanese people. It was a problem whose solution depended upon patience and endurance as well as a diplomatic tact. Japan, which had regained after a long struggle the right of decision in her own affairs, must now acquire the power to have a say among the great nations on all questions involving her interests.

Meantime the United States will remain a difficult problem, he said, not only to Japan, but to the whole of Europe. He added: "Great Britain has been time and again annoyed by the haughty and eccentric manner in which America behaves herself. The arbitration and Panama tolls problems are the latest illustrations."

The veteran statesman continued: "What makes the matter more troublesome is the tempestuous and irascible mood of the American people. One moment they rise and rage like madmen and in the next drop to nonchalance. For instance, the California problem seems already sinking down to the lethargic level. You never know the vagaries of the American psychology."

However, Count Okuma is brightly optimistic and believes Japan and America will eventually settle all their problems even if it takes a century for both are united in strong friendship and common interest.

It was stated by the chief that eighty per cent of the calls received were during the day. It was also stated that an investigation will be made to learn the exact condition of affairs and find whether the lieutenant is obeying orders and remaining at the station.

Police telephone call boxes are to be installed in the city at an early date. The boxes have been shipped from the factory in Pittsburgh and will be installed immediately after their arrival in the city. The boxes will be placed on the beats of the officers and they will be required to call the station every half hour and by this means let it be known that they are on duty.
